The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s misdeeds and how the least he got away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. His mother has been told all about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom that if he does not behave, he will be skipped school that afternoon and next morning. Tom sulked. When the bowl of pudding was set before him, his mother asked if his cold was still worse from his exposure. Tom’s half brother, Sid, hollered that his shirt was still wet from the rain. Tom’s mother asked him if he wanted to go back to school. Tom replied that he didn’t have to go to school today because he was going to wash the neighbor’s clothes.

Tom goes out of the house, whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom runs into a group of boys and joins them in their game of hide-and-seek. He eventually chooses the new comer, the society boy, as his partner.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “wagon alley,” a kind of stubble. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
